

The Gold Mining.—A letter from Greensboro,' N. C. states, "Gold Mines are at a low ebb at this time, so much so, that some of the proprietors are leaving them." Not so in Georgia; notwithstanding the depth of winter, the business is going on with much spirit in Habersham and the adjoining Indian territory. About 600 hands are employed on the Indian lands. They are whites and negroes of course, for an Indian is above work. Some of the lands are said to be very productive. What will the good people of New York say to this? Will they permit it, or must we desist from cheating, and robbing, and plundering, and filching, and defrauding, and pillaging, and a thousand other bad names. They had better look to it. The "poor Indian" is getting sadly out-generalled, and his gold is suffering. They are tearing up the land at a sorrowful rate; and unless something is speedily done, John Ross will have no bullion left to pay the New Yorkers for their kind attention to his interest.
