

In the advertising columns of to-day's paper, will be found Gov. Gilmer's proclamations, the one declaring the laws of Georgia in full force over the Cherokees and abrogating all laws and offices of the Indians, the other forbidding all persons, Indians as well as whites, from digging gold in the Cherokee country. Much praise is due to Mr. Gilmer for his promptitude in thus guarding the domains of the state from further waste, and we hope the civil officers whose duty it is to see the laws of the state faithfully executed, will be equally vigilant in bringing all intruders to condign punishment.

The Augusta Courier says, that the Gold Diggers left the Indian Nation with so much precipitation that "they did not even stop to shake the rattle-snakes out of their blankets, one of which, of formidable size, our informant saw shaken from his warm birth, which must have been the family's bed-fellow the preceding night."
