

By the arrival of a gentleman just from Augusta, we are enabled to anticipate the mail, and present our readers with the very desirable information, that the Supreme Court of the United States has decided in favor of the right of Georgia to extend her laws over the Indians within her limits. We have not been informed of particulars. All hope of protection from the U. States being now cut off, the Indians may be expected speedily and quietly to remove to their Western home.