

The editor of the Augusta Chronicle, in his paper of the 31st ult., reads his friend, the editor of the 'State Rights' Sentinel," a very severe lecture for publishing the copy of a letter addressed to him (Pemberton) by Judge Clayton, declining a nomination for the office of Governor. It seems that Judge Longstreet took the advantage of Mr. Pemberton, while he was negotiating with Judge Clayton on the subject of his objections, &c. by ushering the important document into the world. Mr. P. is outrageous—we hope, however, he will be comforted by ultimately doing away Judge Clayton's objections. We know of no man whom we would delight more to see in the field under the auspices of the nullifiers.
