

Judge Clayton's Speech, in this day's paper, will be read with interest by those who have not already seen it in other papers that have been able to publish it sooner; and it will repay even a second perusal by those who have. The constitutional views it presents, are well deserving of the public attention, and it silences now and forever and ever, amen, the silly slanders that have been got up and circulated here with so much avidity respecting his bank loan.
