

A VICE-PRESIDENT FOR THE WHIG TICKET.

A meeting is called at Abingdon, (Washington county,) to nominate Judge White for the Presidency, and Philip P. Barbour, Esq., for the Vice-Presidency. The Culpeper Messenger, whose suggestions are always entitled to respect, concurs in the nomination of Judge Barbour, and correspondents of our own, express the same wish. Are not these gentlemen rather busy? How know they that Judge Barbour will accept the compliment, or thank them for it? Gen. Harrison is nominated by others, but above all, Judge Mangum of North Carolina, a man of talent and dignity, of tried fidelity and inflexible courage, seems to unite the greater number of hearts. Gov. Wolf of Pennsylvania, Mr. Clayton of Delaware, Gov. Floyd of Virginia

Mr. Tyler, Judge Clayton of Georgia, Francis Granger of New York, and Henry Lee of Boston, have also their friends. Any of these gentlemen will do honor to the place, and if the popular mind were sober, would be preferred to Col. Johnson.

Richmond Whig.
