Mr. SMITH,

YOU will be pleased to publish the following deposition; the fact contained in it, respecting the sum demanded, Mr.
Clayton confessed to me, and to others, but, whether he can justify that charge, by a publication of particular items to that amount, a coraing to bia, is now his only just alternative; but before I take my final adieu of this appeal to the people, I think it my duty to tell them, that the legality of his justification ought to be certified either by one of the judges for the state, or the Attorney-General.

R. DICKINSON.
