

University of Georgia,
ATHENS, Dec. 10, 1818.

THE public are informed, that the operations of the College at this place, will commence on the first Monday in January next, under advantages peculiarly favorable, and such as it has never before possessed since its establishment. It will have every officer usually belonging to such an institution, who for talents and character, in the direction and management of its affairs, it may be confidently said, will not be surpassed in any similar establishment in the United States. It has lately been furnished with a new and extensive library, which will be considerably increased by the commencement of the ensuing year, and during the first months of spring, and perhaps much sooner, it will have the accession of a splendid Philosophical Apparatus—For the purchase of this last, funds were transmitted Mr. Professor Jackson in Europe, early in the present year; and from his judicious selection, a most useful and complete one is expected. The present officers are the Rev'd. Ebenezer Porter, President of the University; Mr. John R. Golding, Professor of Languages; Dr. Henry Jackson, Professor of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry; Mr. James Camak, Professor of Mathematics, and Mr. Ebenezer Newton, first Tutor—Although the President has not been heard from since his recent appointment, yet there is the fullest assurance of his acceptance of the office, and the greatest probability of his being at his station early in January.

The Professors and Tutors will certainly be in their places on the day of the commencement of the Collegiate exercises.
