

1812 August 7 Foreign Correspondent and Georgia Express (Athens, Georgia), p3, "A CARD".

RUSTICUS informs Mr. CLAYTON, that (if he wishes) he may believe that TWO pieces lately published in the Georgia Express, under the signature of RUSTICUS, to have been leveled at him, and that if the cap fits him he may wear it. – The author is not afraid nor ashamed of his name, and if Mr. Clayton wishes to CHASTISE the author, he will undoubtedly make himself known.

[Rusticus published letters on July 24, p3, and on July 31, pp 2-3, crying shame on Federalists and their opposition to the just war with Great Britain. Seems to call for cleansing America of the Tories, which he claims the Federalists all are. Does not specifically mention Clayton, or even describe anyone like him. Like so many items on this microfilm, some of the first letter and way too much of the second letter is lost in the margins of the microfilm.]
